Information about BSRC Lead Position

About Being A BSRC Lead Facilitator

BSRC (Booze, Sex, and Reality Checks) is a presentation that all new WSU students, under the age of 21, are required to attend the week before Fall term classes begin.

In this one-and-a-half-hour presentation, with the assistance of undergraduate Co-facilitators, Lead Facilitators will have discussions with new students about how decisions related to substance use and sex can affect their mental health and academics.

Who can Be a Lead Facilitator

We welcome all WSU graduate students who are pursuing areas of study that include health behaviors within the following degree programs, to apply: Psychology, Education Psychology, Neuroscience, Sociology, Human Development, Nursing, Nutrition and Exercise Physiology, Prevention Science, Kinesiology, Pharmacy, Anthropology, Health Communication & Promotion, Teaching, and Education. Other acceptable areas of study include: Criminal Justice, Communication, and Sport Management.

Additionally, all WSU staff and faculty with at least a master’s degree are encouraged to apply.

Reasons to Participate

- Professional Reference from WSU Health Promotion at Cougar Health Services
- Skills in Motivational Interviewing and facilitating behavior change
- Make a direct impact, in a new way, on the success of hundreds of new students through face to face interaction
- A chance to get away from your regular work environment and try something new at WSU
